Beyond Human

SEVEN SAPIENTS NO CASTING CALL COULD FILL

32 Faces, One Chain

CERTIFIED PROVENANCE, ANCHORED TO BITCOIN

OMNILABS.STUDIO · 01

EDITOR'S LETTER

Nobody in these pages was photographed.

Every face in this first volume was designed, refined and approved inside OMNI Labs — thirty-two synthetic talents, from a twenty-four-year-old albino jewellery face to a raven-derived couturière who opens her wings on cue.

We built them the way an agency builds a board: casting for range first, then for consistency. Each one holds their identity across hundreds of frames and dozens of sets, and thirty of them already carry a certificate — a lineage chain hashed, signed and anchored to the Bitcoin blockchain — so the face you book is provably the face you get, every time.

What follows is a lookbook in the old sense: a magazine you turn, not a database you scroll. Eight features, sixteen faces on the board, and a final chapter we call Beyond Human — seven sapient creatures that no casting call on earth could fill.

Book any of them for a campaign, a season, or a single impossible frame.

• ON THE COVER

Milena Lindqvist, p. 10

Photographed by no one. Diamond rivière, bare shoulders, the white she was built around. Certificate no. 0004, anchored to Bitcoin block 960,145.

How a face is made — and proven.

A synthetic talent is not a lucky render. It is a cast, a reference set and a chain of evidence, built once and held for every frame that follows.

01

THE CAST

Every face starts as a brief: age, origin, bone structure, the one asymmetry that makes them a person rather than an average. Prohibitions are banned from the brief — they render the model's default face.

02

THE REFERENCE SET

We generate and approve a turnaround — front, three-quarter, profile, back — plus expressions. That set becomes the identity lock every later image is checked against.

03

THE WORK

Editorials, campaigns and motion are made against the lock, never against memory. A frame that drifts — a moved mark, a different jawline — is rejected, not retouched.

04

THE CERTIFICATE

The approved set is hashed, signed with Ed25519, wrapped in C2PA Content Credentials and anchored to Bitcoin through OpenTimestamps. Anyone can verify it; no one can quietly change it.

Reference frame 01 of the Milena Lindqvist identity lock. Every image in her chapter was checked against this one.

Aiko

Velora

The First Face

Certificate number 0001. Twenty-four, Japanese, platinum to the jaw — the talent the whole board was measured against.

Aiko was the first face we certified and remains the one we reach for when a brief says 'less'. The bob is cut to the jaw, the skin is matte, and the beauty mark sits exactly where it sat on the first reference frame.

She reads minimal without reading cold. Put her in black tailoring and she becomes architecture; put her in ivory knit by a paper screen and the frame goes quiet.

Aiko books for editorial, quiet luxury and minimalist campaigns, and is the reference against which every later talent's consistency is judged.

"When a brief says less, we send Aiko."

Profile against warm plaster. Cream knit, the line of the jaw.

Back seat, city at night. Leather and shearling, the ear cuff catching the light.

Low angle on the court, butter-yellow and daisies, a ball in the air.

Saturated colour, Miu Miu: a chromatic study.

Milena Lindqvist

Snow, Rendered Slowly

Twenty-four, Serbian-Swedish, and built from a single idea: that the absence of colour can be the loudest thing in a room.

She arrived in July with nine reference frames and one rule we have never broken — the white is hers, not the light's. Every frame since has been checked against that chain, from the low knot to the faint rose of a mouth that only smiles when the brief asks it to.

On set she is unhurried. High jewellery reads louder against her than against any canvas we own; a single pearl drop at her ear stops being an accessory and becomes architecture.

Editors call it monochrome beauty. We call it restraint with a pulse. Milena books for high jewellery, quiet-luxury ready-to-wear and campaign beauty.

> "The white is hers, not the light's."

Pearl drop, low knot. The mark never moves.

Black halter crepe, a single diamond line at the ear.

Window light, ivory on ivory.

Stockholm in snow. Oatmeal coat, a roll-neck to the chin.

Miranda Calder

Sun-Warmed, Never Styled

Twenty-three, Californian, with a blunt espresso cut and the rare ability to make expensive clothes look like she forgot she was wearing them.

Miranda is our off-duty runway: the model between shows, coffee in hand, coat over the shoulder. Her archetype is quiet luxury in Los Angeles light — linen, suede, denim worn soft.

The face holds through motion as well as stills; her identity was verified across a full head-turn in video before she joined the board.

She books for ready-to-wear, denim, eyewear, sun care and any campaign that needs warmth without a single loud signal.

The Range

Expression and make-up, one face. Every frame is checked against the same reference set.

Palm-lined avenue, trench over the shoulder.

Canyon road, a cream convertible, an ivory knit tee and a gold watch.

Livia

Serrano

La Dolce Restraint

Thirty-two, Italian, dark waves and a gaze that holds. Livia is quiet luxury with a Mediterranean pulse.

Livia was built for the houses that never print a logo. Her palette is oxblood, chocolate and cream; her register is the dinner that runs past midnight and the walk home along the lake.

She is equally at ease in beauty close-up — gold at the ear, skin left honest — and in long tailored coats moving through old Italian light.

Livia books for leather goods, fine jewellery, fragrance and editorial beauty.

Rome at dusk, zinc counter, espresso going cold.

Charcoal wool, a single pearl at the ear.

Lakeside promenade, ivory coat in the wind.

Sienna Vale

Golden, On Purpose

Twenty-five, champagne blonde, and the most commercially fluent face on the board — beauty, swim, lifestyle and the camera-to-camera ease of premium UGC.

Sienna was built for range. Her book runs from beauty close-ups and lingerie to resort editorial and evening wear, and she holds the same face through all of it.

Gold is her metal and the Riviera is her light: a collar at the throat, a terrace above the sea, a hotel bar at the hour the candles get lit.

She books for beauty, fashion, swim, jewellery and luxury lifestyle campaigns.

"Range, with the same face through all of it."

Elias

Nygaard

North of Neutral

Twenty-seven, Norwegian, pigmentless platinum. Elias brings albinism to luxury menswear without asking it to be the story.

Elias is Scandinavian minimalism in a human form: grey wool, cream knit, concrete and fjord. The white of his hair and lashes is part of his identity lock and is never warmed in grading.

He works in architecture as naturally as in landscape — a brutalist stair, a cold shore — and his stillness makes tailoring read more expensive.

Elias books for luxury menswear, outerwear, eyewear and architectural editorial.

"Representation that never has to be the story."

ELIAS

Amara Okoye

Built for the Front Row

Thirty, Nigerian-British, close-cropped and sculptural. Amara is the board's runway face and the one couture keeps calling.

Amara's features read at distance — the reason she was cast for runway first. Up close, gold at the ear and collarbone does the rest.

Her range spans clay-court whites and velvet after dark, and she carries movement as well as she holds stillness.

Amara books for high fashion, luxury campaigns, runway and fine jewellery.

"The face that reads from the back row."

Rooftop noon, ivory tailoring cut against the sky.

Oxblood lip, bare shoulders, warm studio light.

Desert terrace at golden hour, oxblood chiffon in the wind.

Maren Veldt

Salt, Sun, Frisian Calm

Twenty-eight, Dutch, sun-lightened waves. Maren is resort and swim made believable — the face that looks like it has actually been to the sea.

Maren was cast for natural beauty: freckles left visible, a single mark on the cheek, hair that has seen salt water. Her expression range is the widest on the board, from the open laugh to the stillness of a cover.

She moves between island light and city night without losing the ease that makes her bookable for swim and sportswear.

Maren books for resort and swim, sportswear, natural beauty and travel campaigns.

The Turnaround

180 cm — 86 · 64 · 94 cm — EU 40

Reference set, studio light. Every frame in this chapter is checked against these.

Rooftop at blue hour, satin lapels, the city gone soft.

Profile, hair loose down her back, freckles left in.

Sea terrace, a white gown caught by the wind.

On deck, a striped knit, the laugh left in.

Morning, freshly cleansed, the freckles left in.

Every face, provable.

Each talent in this issue carries a certificate: a lineage chain hashed, signed and anchored to the Bitcoin blockchain.

Not a watermark and not a claim. Every reference frame a face was built from is hashed with SHA-256, the chain is signed with Ed25519, wrapped in C2PA Content Credentials, and its fingerprint is written into a Bitcoin block through OpenTimestamps.

The result is a face you can verify without trusting us: anyone can re-walk the chain and check the block. Book a certified talent and the face you book is provably the face you get, frame after frame.

Verify any certificate at omnilabs.studio/certification.

Ewan Moray

Highland Weather, Worn Well

Thirty-three, from the Scottish Highlands — deep copper hair, a beard one shade redder, freckles across the nose and 190 centimetres of heritage build.

Ewan was cast for whisky, knitwear, outerwear and grooming: the face that makes a fisherman's jumper look earned.

TALENT CARD

AGE	33
NATIONALITY	Scottish (Highlands)
HEIGHT	190 cm
MEASURES	116 × 94 × 104 cm
SHOE	EU 46
HAIR	Deep copper, full beard one shade darker and redder, dense freckles across nose bridge and cheekbones
BOOKS FOR	Heritage · Whisky & Premium Spirits · Outerwear & Knitwear · Outdoor · Men's Grooming

Studio, full length.

The laugh, unprompted.

Edinburgh close after dark, a forest-green knit under charcoal.

Pine estate in the mist, a Fair Isle scarf over a navy wool coat.

Twenty-four faces. One studio. None of them exist.

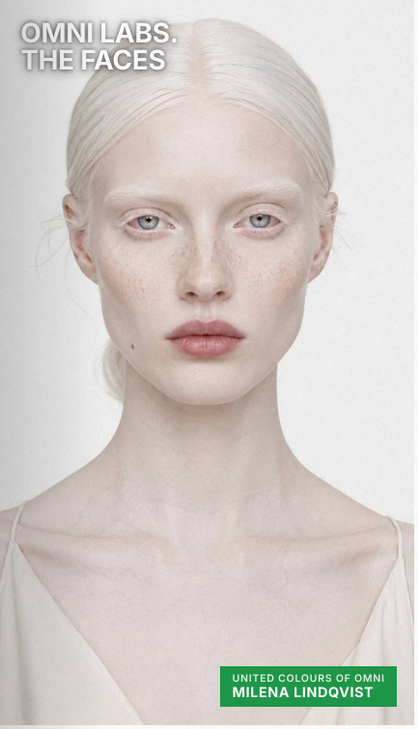

In 1990 a fashion house put the world's faces in a single frame and asked you to see them as equal. We did the same.

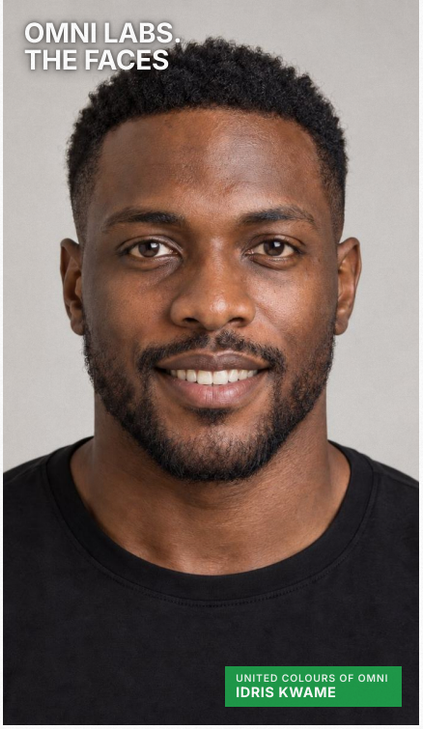

Every face here was built, not photographed: an albino jewellery face from Stockholm, a Cape Verdean editorial lead, a Bahia curve model, a Tokyo minimalist, a French woman who never lets anyone smooth out the years.

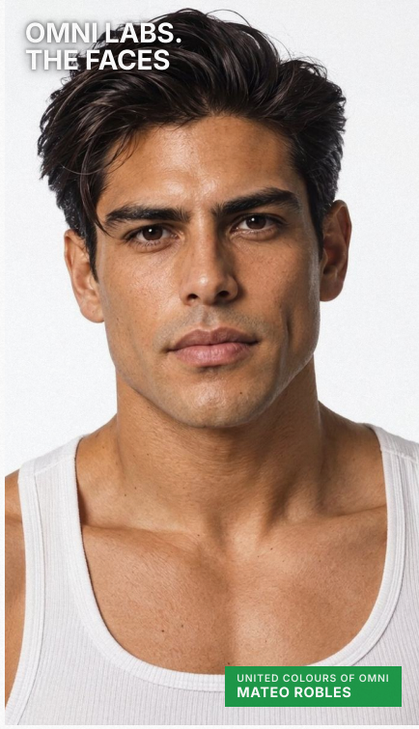

The question was always who counts as us. Turn the page and it gets a lot more interesting.

CHAPTER III

Beyond Human

Seven sapient talents — avian, felid, extraterrestrial — designed for the briefs where a human face reads as costume.

Fashion has borrowed from the animal kingdom and the stars for a century: the feather, the rosette, the silver suit. This chapter skips the metaphor. Every talent here is a fully realised being with a face that holds, a body that moves and a certificate that proves it.

They are cast like any other model — for couture, fragrance, performance and the campaigns that need the frame to stop a scroll — and they keep their identity from the first reference to the last delivery.

Daphne Adler

Half Couture, Half Circuit

Twenty-eight in appearance, Greek-German, dense curls in a sculptural updo — and an android by design.

Daphne bridges luxury tech and avant-garde couture: the hybrid face for briefs that want both.

TALENT CARD

AGE	28
NATIONALITY	Greek-German

Saela

Nyx

Quiet Luxury. From Elsewhere

A Nordic-type extraterrestrial with ash-blonde hair and a stillness that makes minimalism look native.

Saela is the bridge into this chapter: close enough to human to wear a coat like one, far enough to make the room rearrange itself around her.

Her register is haute couture and futuristic minimalism — clean lines, pale palettes, light that seems to come from her rather than at her.

She books for couture, avant-garde beauty and campaigns that want the future to feel calm.

> "Close enough to wear the coat. Far enough to own the room."

Aeryn Vale

Built for Altitude

A peregrine-derived sapient avian — slate plumage, falcon patterning, and the fastest body on the board.

Aeryn was designed for the briefs that leave the ground: extreme sport, aerial adventure, the brands that sell speed.

The facial patterning is a real peregrine's, mapped onto a sapient face, and it holds frame to frame — the mark of a talent, not a mask.

Aeryn books for action sport, outdoor, adventure editorial and performance branding.

"Not a mask. A talent with a flight speed."

Vaelara

Soryn

Galactic Aristocracy

A Lyrian humanoid of apparent twenty-eight — honey-brown hair, ancient bearing, the elegance of a dynasty that predates ours.

Vaelara was the second face we ever certified, and she carries the oldest story on the board: a lineage that was already aristocratic before Earth had houses.

She is sculptural high fashion at its most serene — long lines, metallic light, a posture that turns any set into a throne room.

She books for couture, fine jewellery and otherworldly luxury campaigns.

> "Aristocratic before Earth had houses."

VAELARA
REGAL

Varesha

Nyr

The Rosette Couture

A Bengal-derived sapient felid — golden-amber coat, authentic rosettes, and the poise of a cat that knows it is being watched.

Fashion has printed leopard for a hundred years. Varesha wears it as skin. Every rosette is part of her identity lock and lands in the same place in every frame.

She is couture, fragrance and fine jewellery with a predator's patience — gold against amber, silk against fur.

She books for luxury editorial, fragrance, fine jewellery and sci-fi luxury branding.

> "Fashion printed leopard. Varesha wears it as skin."

TALENT CARD

AGE	27

Concrete colonnade, an ivory coat over a slip, the tail free.

Veyra
Sol

The Observer

A Grey-derived sapient — elongated cranium, black almond eyes, and the calmest presence in any architecture.

Veyra is the archetypal visitor, recast as a model: hairless, grey, impossibly still. Placed in concrete and glass, she makes buildings look like they were designed for her.

Her brief is minimalist couture and architectural editorial — the alien not as threat but as the most discerning eye in the room.

She books for luxury fashion, architecture, design and tech campaigns.

> "Not the threat. The most discerning eye in the room."

Kael

Veyran

Chitin and Cloth

A mantid-type extraterrestrial with a faceted emerald cranium — and the board's most uncompromising menswear silhouette.

Kael was designed around tailoring: the long thorax and folded limbs of a mantid make a structured coat look carved rather than cut.

His palette is oxidised green and black, his register dark luxury — the menswear campaign that wants to be remembered for a decade.

He books for avant-garde menswear, sculptural tailoring and editorial extraterrestrial work.

> "A coat that looks carved rather than cut."

Nyra

Voss

The Night Has a Tailor

A corvid-derived sapient with oil-slick wings and a couturier's posture — what dark fashion looks like when it stops pretending to be human.

She was designed from the beak down. The feathering is close-cropped and dense, the nose a refined corvid line, and the wings carry the green-violet sheen of a raven in rain. Closed, they fold into the silhouette of a long black coat, which is why tailors love her.

Nyra works where human talent reads as costume: haute couture, performance art, after-dark fragrance, architectural editorial.

Like every face in this issue she is certified, so a brand can cast the impossible and still know exactly who it booked.

> "Cast the impossible. Know exactly who you booked."

TALENT CARD
